From 2000 to 2002, the number of people in the United States who were employed in the health care industry increased by 1.5 million. This increase was primarily due to the growth of the nursing profession, which saw a 1.2 million increase in its workforce. The growth of the nursing profession was driven by several factors, including an aging population, an increase in the number of people with chronic conditions, and a growing emphasis on preventive care. The growth of the nursing profession was also driven by the need for more nurses to care for the growing number of people who are being discharged from the hospital.
